

TAIWAN PAN'S CAKE

| DESIGN MANUAL |

preface

for pan's cake, the logo is more than a symbol printed on a box; it functions as a promise. in taiwan's gifting culture, pineapple cakes often travel between families, colleagues, and friends as a gesture of respect and care. over time, customers come to associate the brand mark with stability, sincerity, and a familiar sense of comfort. that trust is built through consistency—consistent taste, consistent craftsmanship, and, increasingly, consistent visual presentation.

as pan's cake expands across e-commerce platforms, social media, and broader retail channels, the identity must perform in many more contexts than before: a small mobile banner, a product label, a shipping carton, a storefront sign, or a food truck. without clear rules, the logo can easily be stretched, recolored, placed on low-contrast backgrounds, or paired with inconsistent typography, gradually weakening recognition.

this design manual defines the visual identity system as an operational standard. it specifies logo usage (variants, clear space, minimum size, background rules, and incorrect examples), the color palette, typography, supporting graphics, and approved application formats. the purpose is simple: to ensure that every output—regardless of size, material, or platform—communicates the same brand with clarity and consistency.

Logo Variations

these versions ensure sufficient contrast and readability while maintaining brand consistency.

Final Smaller Logo

this page presents the finalized smaller logo selected after testing multiple options.

it is the only approved compact version and should replace all draft or experimental designs.

Logotype

the logotype defines the typographic presentation of the brand name in both chinese and english.

Supporting Graphics

Graphic Elements

graphic elements are secondary visual components used to support layout structure and brand recognition.

they help organize content and guide visual flow without competing with the logo or primary information.

Graphic Style Variants I two graphic style variants are defined to allow controlled visual flexibility.

both styles follow the same design logic and proportions, ensuring consistency while adapting to different communication needs.

Graphic Style Variants II

the logotype draws inspiration from the rounded geometry of traditional pastry molds, paired with modern typographic rhythm to reflect warmth and balance.

Pattern Applications patterns are derived from the brand's visual elements and may be used as background or decorative layers.

they should be applied carefully and must not reduce the visibility of the logo or essential content.

Monthly Design System

the monthly design system is composed of three core elements: seasonal color, monthly botanical symbols, and seal-script characters.

seasonal color defines the temperature of time across the year, while each botanical symbol represents the natural rhythm of its month.

the seal-script character functions as the structural core of each composition, anchoring the visual form and guiding its growth.

usage rules:

1. the relative relationship between the three core elements must not be altered.
2. the seal-script character must not be used independently or removed from the composition.
3. colors must strictly follow the palette assigned to each corresponding month.
4. the structure must not be rotated, distorted, scaled disproportionately, or reconstructed.

Applications

Business Card

the business card applies the identity system in a compact format.
it presents essential contact information clearly while maintaining visual balance and brand consistency.

Store Business Cards

Employee Business Cards

Name Badges

name badges use the smaller logo and clear typography to ensure easy identification.

they contribute to a unified and professional appearance for staff members.

Letterhead

the a4 letter layout follows a clean and structured format suitable for official communication.

it incorporates the logo, brand colors, and typography to ensure consistency across documents.
